The Fine Print...

You are engaging our genealogy researchers. They offer their expert time and attention to your research needs. Therefore, a charge is made for their time. Genealogy researchers are entitled to be paid for all time rendered to you at their hourly rates. No ethical researcher can predict or guarantee what new documents or information can be discovered about your family. That information won't be known until research is completed. In fact, there is no guarantee that our genealogy researchers, or any other genealogy researchers, will be able to locate any new information about your ancestors. However, regardless the outcome, our skilled researchers will provide an explanation of research undertaken and include suggestions for continued research.

Because you are purchasing a genealogy researcher's time and expertise, and not a tangible product, your research cost is non-refundable. If you cancel your research request, the cancellation will take effect immediately, and our researchers will write a summary of the research completed as of the cancellation date. All their time and expenses to date will then be charged to you. There will be no refunds related to lack of results.

We guarantee that we will use our combined best efforts and many years experience to provide you with help researching your family history. If the family to be searched is out of our skill area, we will let you know and suggest alternatives.
